Centre ACER, the center for scientific research and technological development in maple production, has been a leader in innovation for the maple industry since 1998. This year, the Centre ACER celebrates 25 years in stimulating excellence, supporting the quality and profitability of the maple industry. By combining knowledge and vision, this true network of innovation promotes influence, national and international development and ensures the sustainability of the maple industry in Quebec.

Built by a passionate team, the Centre ACER has over 145 years of maple knowledge, and is developing unique scientific and technological expertise that meets the needs of the industry. This expertise is transmitted through innovative research projects, various products specifically designed to ensure the quality of maple syrup, as well as technical training adapted to the needs of the different players in the maple industry.

At the Centre ACER, maple expertise is our strength, our passion!
